Introduction

Welcome to the 15th edition of the BMC Climbing Wall Directory, which is based on the information held on the BMC climbing wall database. With the inclusion of 386 climbing walls in the directory this year as well as some fun and games with the UrbanClimber UK indoor training section, this is the most comprehensive directory yet.

Since the last edition in 2015 the climbing wall industry has expanded at a pace and there are 20 new walls to be added to the already excellent range of British indoor climbing.

The BMC continues to work to improve access to facilities for climbers, hill walkers & mountaineers, not just to climbing walls but also to the natural facilities that bring us so much pleasure. Despite much success we still need your support so join the BMC today.

Dave Turnbull

BMC Chief Executive Officer

The BMC and Climbing Walls

The BMC is committed to the increased provision of climbing walls on a sustainable basis. The BMC is also able to offer specialist advice on a wide range of climbing wall issues. The BMC works in conjunction with the Climbing Wall Manufacturers Association (CWMA) and the Association of British Climbing Walls (ABC) to improve industry standards.

BMC Participation Statement

Whenever you are climbing you should always remember the following statement.

"The BMC recognises that climbing, hill walking and mountaineering are activities with a danger of personal injury or death. Participants in these activities should be aware of and accept these risks and be responsible for their own actions and involvement."

Using the Directory

A few hints and tips to help you get the most out of the directory and maximise your use of the walls.

- The climbing walls are split by country, and listed alphabetically by town. In addition the walls in England are split into the eight BMC areas.
- The following abbreviations are used within the facility descriptions:

Abbreviations

LC = Leisure Centre, SC = Sports Centre,

ComColl = Community College,

OEC = Outdoor Education Centre,

CC = Climbing Centre, CW = Climbing Wall,

Uni = University, sqm = square meterage, TR = top rope.

The following icons are used to indicate the facilities a climbing wall may have:

The wall is a member of the Association of British Climbing Walls.

Walls that give some form of discount to BMC members.

Changing facilities.

There are some catering facilities at the wall. Please note that this could be anything from vending machines to three course meals, and/or bar facilities.

The wall has a stock of, for example, boots, harnesses, helmets or belay devices available for hire. Please note that it is very unusual for a climbing wall to offer 'leading ropes' for hire.

The climbing wall offers instructional courses. These may vary from skills courses to national qualifications administered by Mountain Training, or even roped access courses.

Scottish regional centre of excellence.

The climbing wall sells a range of climbing products, this may vary from basics such as chalk to a fully stocked outdoor shop.

Other sports centre facilities available.

The wall allows free or subsidised access for the British Climbing & Bouldering Team members.

Primary NICAS – Primary National Indoor Climbing Award Scheme centre – please see www.nicas.co.uk.

NICAS – National Indoor Climbing Award Scheme awarding centre – please see www.nicas.co.uk for more details.

Climbing walls who have auto belays installed on certain climbing lines. Auto belays allow a climber to climb on their own.

Walls that offer drytooling - climbing with ice axes on bolt-on holds. This will be either in fixed areas or at certain times. Contact the wall for more information.

National Performance Centre in England & Wales.

Primary NIBAS - Primary National Indoor Bouldering Award Scheme centre. Please see www.nicas.co.uk

The role of the BMC

The BMC is the representative body for climbers, hill walkers and mountaineers in England and Wales. For Scotland the representative body is the Mountaineering Council of Scotland and in Ireland it is Mountaineering Ireland.

Join the BMC and support the vital work we do.

Amongst other things the BMC:

- Promotes the interests, and protects the freedom of climbers, hill walkers and mountaineers to enjoy their activities;
- Lobbies and advises government on a range of important issues, such as access and changes in legislation;
- Relies on a network of dedicated volunteers and employs 31 full and part-time staff to implement the BMC's work programmes including: Access and Conservation, Youth and Equity, Safety and Skills, Climbing Walls and Climbing Competitions, Guidebooks and Clubs;
- Provides information through seminars and good practice lectures, as well as producing a range of posters, leaflets, booklets, DVDs and other publications aimed at increasing people's awareness of all climbing, hill walking and mountaineering related activities and issues;
- Advises on all aspects of climbing wall activities;
- Runs regional and national climbing competitions;
- Examines equipment failures and reports on these;
- Maintains a Register of Expert Witnesses;
- Has an important role within the international mountaineering and climbing federation, the UIAA, in setting international standards for climbing and mountaineering equipment and having BMC representation on all UIAA Commissions.

The BMC is a democratic organisation that encourages members to contribute to its ongoing work. Many contribute easily and simply by joining the BMC. This can be done quickly on the BMC website. Some people contribute by attending meetings or volunteering to help at various events. All BMC members are encouraged to attend Area Meetings. These are local forums and the democratic grassroots of the BMC. Full details can be found on the BMC website. In addition, there are also substantial personal benefits to joining. For instance:

- All Individual, Club, and Family Members receive £10m Civil Liability Insurance. The policy provides worldwide cover for any civil liability claim arising in connection with hill walking, climbing and mountaineering. It is recommended that all participants join the BMC, or a BMC Affiliated Club, to be covered by this important insurance.

- Individual Members also receive 4 copies of Summit magazine per year.
- Discounts in over 600 retail outlets.
- Additionally, the BMC offers market leading BMC Travel and Activity Insurance. This specialist insurance is only available to BMC (and other Mountaineering Council) members and is specifically designed for climbers, hill walkers and mountaineers. Any surplus is reinvested to support the BMC's vital work.

A full list of membership benefits appears on the BMC website. You can join online at www.thebmc.co.uk or by calling on 0161 445 6111.

URBAN CLIMBER

The Lakeland Climbing Centre, Kendal

This year will be the 20th anniversary of The Lakeland Climbing Centre in Kendal and since that time, we have welcomed nearly a million customers through our doors.

We have gone from a Centre with 20 leading lines of up to 12m in height and a small bouldering room, to one of the largest centres in the UK. We have a Main Wall of 26m, over 200 leading routes and three different bouldering areas, one of which is specifically for beginners and children. In addition, we have world class training facilities, a Crazy Climb facility, a dry tooling and aid climbing wall and Europe's first indoor Via Ferrata. Our café, shop and conference facilities round out the overall experience. We are very proud of the ongoing change and development here, especially given the relatively small size of our host town with its population of 25,000. Our new bouldering centre in Vauxhall, London has a slightly less challenging demographic with a potential customer base of 10 million.

The Via Ferrata is a fabulous new addition for adults and teenagers alike. It is a journey through the Centre that involves steep wall climbing, tight tunnels, ladders and rope swings, ending in the ultimate 'Jump of Doom' which involves a leap into space where you freefall six metres before being slowed to land 20m below. Whilst many newcomers revel in this final thrill, many hardened climbers blanch at the anathema of such a long freefall and take the alternate 'stairway of shame' back down to the ground.

We have also recently opened our dry tooling wall, where you can also practise aid climbing and placing of natural gear, ready for that big move outside. Where else in Britain can you smack your axes into a wall, knock in a peg, place a skyhook or fix a cam in complete security and in the dry. Experiment to your heart's content without desecrating real rock and incurring the wrath of locals, who might otherwise want to be smacking their axes into places you would rather they didn't.

Whilst there has been a huge amount of change down at Kendal Wall, what has stayed constant throughout has been our focus on our customers. They are our oxygen that has kept us energized and engaged for all these years. We have introduced people of all ages and backgrounds to our wonderful sport. For a number of them, they have discovered a passion in life that has opened up new horizons for them in terms of challenge, reward, friendships and stability. We delight in our core group of over-50s who stay young and fit through their regular visits and stimulation through long term friendships. However, keeping everyone happy all the time is an impossible task and we wanted to share with you the key gripes that we try to address:

1 Route grading is an endless source of complaint. It's too hard or it's too easy is the constant refrain. Route setters who can breeze up a F7c are not best placed to differentiate between a F6a and a F6b. However, our in-house team are very good and thoughtful about this issue and increasingly all routes get thoroughly tested by appropriate adults i.e. those who climb at the grade in question. We try and avoid the situation where there are only two grades – those you can do and those you can't and instead try to ensure a range of styles and difficulties that encourage boundless enthusiasm for upward progression.

2 We aim to change our routes every four months, which means about 10 new routes a week. Half of these will be F6a+ and below but again we struggle to keep all customers happy all of the time. Some customers want more change, others like 'old favourites' and to work routes over very long periods of time. We do have about 20 'features' routes which have been the same since 1995 – anyone for our overhanging fist jam crack at that horror grade of 5.10d? Even Yosemite veterans struggle on this one.

3 Route steepness also causes constant debate. Old style climbing and bouldering involved technical sequences and delicate footwork. We feel it's important to prepare people for real climbing outside. However, the younger generation seems to want steep and steeper (and a resultant increase in shoulder injuries). A smeary micro-hold where your foot could pop is no longer the desired challenge du jour. The hard lads looked aghast when we said we were building some vertical and slabby panels in the bouldering room. But, hopefully, their needs are addressed as we have overhangs from five to 60 degrees so whatever your leaning, you can get stronger with us.

4 It's too cold in winter. This is tough for us and many other walls to solve. Our building was designed to make dry powder milk by applying lots of heat to the liquid feed and to lose this excess heat by negative insulation. Our solution is radiant gas and electric heaters at ground level but the best solution, and the most environmentally friendly, is to warm up properly, bring a thick belay jacket and climb fast.

5 We often hear that the apprenticeship for new climbers is too long a road to travel especially for the 'quick-hit' youth of today. We try to address this through stimulating instruction but also our Crazy Climb facility which is highly accessible and allows a session of almost constant climbing on bright, challenging panels with auto belay protection. No standing around waiting for others or getting fingers stuck in the platey thing. Also when young top-ropers are ready for leading, the auto belays are great for breaking the habit of waiting for a tight rope when the going gets tough. Just climb and fall.

6 Registration procedures can test the patience of Job. Well, unfortunately, as for all walls, this is required to ensure we uphold our duty of care to our customers. However, we have tried to lighten the load through online registration before arrival, iPad stations and automated check-in scanners.

7 The final gripe is cliquy desk staff that only talk to each other and never at all to a climber who 'only' climbs F6a. For us at Kendal, we find this an intolerable attitude towards customers and fellow climbers. We all started out in the lower grades and as we get older we will all revert back to even lower grades. Half of our customers climb in the 5s and lower 6s and over 50% of our routes are F6a+ or below. We operate to uphold that great Alex Lowe truism: "The best climber in the world is the one having the most fun" so get yourselves up to Kendal and have some fun.
